'Marathon of Health'

► Local family running across Canada, U.S. to combat couch potato lifestyle

While most people kept cool indoors and in pools during Thursday's scorchers, the Chicoine family ran more than 130 kilometres in 36 C weather on their way into Ottawa.

"It was hardest run of the trip," said 19-year-old Jake Chicoine, one of the family's six kids. "It was challenging, that's for sure. I felt like fainting."

The family of eight from Wakefield, Quebec started the Marathon of Health in Vancouver in May and is running relay style across Canada and the U.S. Their goal is to inspire North Americans to reverse their sedentary lifestyles by promoting physical activity.

The father, Ed, a chiropractor of 28 years, said he was tired of seeing people come into his office and not taking care of themselves. Now his family is raising funds for KidSport Canada, Right to Play, and Get America Fit.

"Initially I was going to run by myself across the country and then my kids said 'there's no way you're doing it without me' and they all joined," said Ed.

The family hopes to raise $5 million dollars to promote kids' fitness in North America.

Ceiling fire in Vanier townhouse

Six people have been turned out of their homes after a fire at a Vanier townhouse.

Forty-two fire personnel responded to the fire at 202 Presland Rd. just before 1 p.m. yesterday after reports of smoke coming from a bedroom. Firefighters controlled the blaze, which was contained to the ceiling and roof.

No civilians or firefighters were injured. Damage to the house and its contents is estimated at $250,000. JOE LOFARO

City backed on transit scheduling

An arbitrator has released a final ruling on a scheduling dispute between the City of Ottawa and OC Transpo drivers with Amalgamated Transit Union Local 279.

The ruling potentially clears the way for negotiations on a new collective agreement.

The city received the final award by the Keller Interest Arbitration Panel Friday for the 2008-2011 collective agreement. The panel recognized that the city had complied with earlier rulings to establish a scheduling system at OC Transpo that is consistent with the majority of the North American transit industry.

A 22-year-old Osgoode man was killed in a single-car crash early yesterday when his car crossed into the oncoming lane, caught the gravel shoulder and rolled, police said.

Tyson Wiegand was ejected from the vehicle and paramedics pronounced him dead at the scene.

Police said the crash happened sometime between 3 a.m. and 6 a.m.

on Snake Island Road between Nixon Drive and Doyle Road. It's not clear why the westbound vehicle crossed into the oncoming lane, but police are investigating the cause of the incident.

"We don't have anything to say right now. We just need a little bit of time," said a woman who answered the phone at the home of Wiegand's father, Michael. Wiegand, who worked as a landscaper, is also survived by his mother, Deborah, and his sisters, Tasha, 19, and Corinne, 20.

Hundreds of gay couples recited vows in emotion-choked voices and triumphantly hoisted their long-awaited marriage certificates yesterday as New York became the sixth and largest state to recognize same-sex weddings.

Couples began saying "I do" at midnight from Niagara Falls to Long Island, though New York City became the sometimes raucous centre of action.

Meanwhile, thousands of over just yet.

New York's adoption of legal same-sex marriage is viewed as a pivotal moment in the national gay-rights movement and was expected to galvanize supporters and opponents alike.

The state joined Connecticut, Iowa, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont, along with Washington, D.C., when it voted last month to legalize gay marriage.

INTELLIGENCE FINDINGS

RCMP kept tabs on renowned academic

Canada's intelligence service spied on renowned literary scholar Northrop Frye, closely eyeing his involvement in the anti-Vietnam War movement, an academic forum on China and efforts to end apartheid in South Africa.

Newly released

archival records show the RCMP Security Service relied on a secret informant to help compile a 142-page file on the esteemed University of Toronto professor, who died in 1991 at age 78. A bespectacled academic, Frye seems an unlikely counter-intelligence target. But the Mounties were wary of anyone deemed influential among the burgeoning New Left and monitored universities, the media, churches and political organizations during the Cold War.

Evacuees may soon return

The Ontario government says the 3,600 people evacuated from their communities because of fires in the northern part of the province could be able to return home soon.

Deputy Community Safety Minister Ian Davidson says officials will decide which people get to return first based on the safety of the places they're returning to and the capacity of the government to move them back.

Norway suspect sought crusade

► Anders Breivik released manifesto with anti-Muslim rants ► Doctor says gunman used special bullets

The man blamed for killing at least 93 people during terrorist attacks on Norway's government headquarters and an island retreat for young people wanted to trigger an anti-Muslim revolution in Norwegian society, his lawyer said yesterday.

The manifesto that 32-year-old suspect Anders Behring Breivik published online ranted against Muslim immigration to Europe and vowed revenge on those "indigenous Europeans" whom he deemed had betrayed their heritage. The document said they would be punished for their "treasonous acts."

Ammo 'exploded'

► Dr. Colin Poole, head of surgery at Ringrikt Hospital in Honefoss, northwest of Oslo, told The Associated Press the gunman used special bullets designed to disintegrate inside the body and cause maximum internal damage.

► Poole said surgeons treating 16 gunshot victims have recovered no full bullets. "These bullets more or less exploded inside the body."

Police said they were analyzing the approximately 1,500-page document. They said it was published Friday shortly before the back-to-back bomb and gun attacks.

Nova Scotia Nominee Program, Economic Stream Refund

Preliminary Notice

If you paid fees to the Economic Stream of the Nova Scotia Nominee Program, there is a proposed settlement of your claim being considered by the courts. Read this to find out more.

What is this about?

A lawsuit was started against the Province of Nova Scotia in 2009. The goal was to get a refund for people who applied for and paid fees into the former Economic Stream of the Nova Scotia Nominee Program. The Supreme Court of Nova Scotia is now being asked to certify that lawsuit as a class action. Your legal rights may be affected. The lawyers for both sides have made a deal that would give a refund to eligible people. The Supreme Court of Nova Scotia is being asked to approve the settlement as fair and reasonable.

Would I be included if the court approves the settlement?

You would be if you (1) paid money to Nova Scotia under the Economic Stream of the Nova Scotia Nominee Program, (2) landed and obtained permanent resident status in Canada, and (3) did not already get a refund. As long as you told the truth in your application and immigration filings, you should be eligible for a refund.

How much would I get?

If you were not paid anything under a business mentorship, you will get $75,000 less approved legal fees if your claim is successful. If you did receive anything under a business mentorship, your payment will be further reduced by that amount.

Would I have to pay anything out of my own pocket?

No. The lawyers' fees will simply be deducted as set out above. You will not be billed. The amount deducted from your own award for legal fees will be 15% or less. There is a costs award of $450,000 proposed to be paid on account of fees by the government directly. The Supreme Court must approve the lawyer's fee as fair and reasonable.

Can I apply to get my money now?

No. The court has to approve the settlement first. If you would like to make sure that you receive a claim form later, you can email your details to the lawyers for the proposed class. The contact lawyer for the class is Greg McMullen, who can be reached at gmcullen@brannmac.com or 604-631-2560.

What do I do if I want to support or oppose the settlement?

Let Greg McMullen know. You can email or mail him your views at gmcullen@brannmac.com or 1410-777 Hornby Street, Vancouver BC, V6Z 1S4. You also have the right to attend the hearing, which will take place at The Law Courts Building, 1815 Upper Water St., Halifax on Monday, September 26, 2011 at 9:30 a.m.

What if I do not want to be part of the class action if it is approved?

If the settlement is approved, you have the option not to participate. You will be able to complete an opt out form if you do not want to receive any benefits or be bound by the result. If you do not want to take part, you have to opt out. If you opt out, you will not get any benefit from the settlement.

What if too many people opt out?

If more than 50 people opt out, the Province will have the right to cancel the settlement. Neither the Province nor the lawyer for the class expect this to occur however.

I have other questions.

For more information, visit <http://www.branchmacmaster.com/nova-scotia-immigration/>. The formal court documents can be found there. If you still have questions, just contact the lawyer appointed by the court to act for the class, Greg McMullen at Branch MacMaster LLP, at gmcullen@brannmac.com or 604-631-2560.

FBI probes News Corp.

► U.S. allegations of phone hacking ► PI claims News Corp. reporters sought phone records of 9/11 victims

The FBI is launching a preliminary review of whether phone hacking and bribery by Rupert Murdoch's media empire violated U.S. laws.

That means Murdoch and his company face investigations on two continents. Depending on what turns up, it could threaten other Murdoch properties, which include the Fox television network.

Published reports say Murdoch's parent company, News Corp., based in New York, is assembling a gold-plated roster of lawyers to deal with any U.S. legal action. News Corp. would not confirm the hirings.

- Investigators also plan to question actor Jude Law about allegations his phone was hacked while he was in the U.S.

North Korea joins the wired world

North Korea is undergoing a digital revolution, even as it grapples with chronic shortages of food and fuel. Its cyberspace policies are among the most restrictive in the world. Yet inside Pyongyang, there's a small but growing digital culture, observers say.

North Korea's biggest IT hub, the state-run Korea Computer Centre, has been around since 1990.

Since then, North Korean IT firms have quietly been developing software for banks in the Middle East, applications for cell-phone makers in Japan and South Korea and even video games for Nintendo and Playstation, said Paul Tjia, a Dutch IT consultant who works with North Korean companies.

Programmers there have also developed games for Facebook, the iPhone and iPad, Wii and Black-Berry, he said.

But many in the West remain wary, seeing in North Korea's bid to train a generation of computer experts the spectre of hackers launching attacks on the defence systems of rival governments.

Sudan issues new currency after southern independence

ABD RAOUF/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sudan has introduced new banknotes and coins stripped of any symbols linked to South Sudan, which declared independence this month after more than a half-century of intermittent war with the north.

South Sudan began using its own currency nearly a week ago.

The Sudanese government began circulating a new edition of the Sudanese pound yesterday as a precautionary measure following the loss of oil revenues resulting from South Sudan's independence, according to Sudanese President Omar al-Bashir.

While the new Sudanese notes are similar to the old ones, the 10-pound banknote no longer depicts a large-horned cow, a symbol of South Sudan's western Bahar Gazal region.

Sudan has also gone back to using a one-pound coin instead of a paper bill.

South Sudan became officially independent from the north on July 9, breaking away after more than 50 years of armed conflict.

WHO'S AFRAID OF A LITTLE HEAT?

URBAN COMPASS

STEVE COLLINS
METRO OTTAWA

We're getting a reprieve not only from the past week's sodden, record-threatening heat, but also the low-level alarmism that rolled in with it. With all the warnings in circulation, you'd think we'd never seen hot weather in July before.

Perspective should never be lost. Unlike other areas of the country, we haven't spent part of our summer either flooded or on fire. Evacuees from Kingfisher Lake First Nation, some of whom are staying in the residences at Algonquin College while they wait out forest fires, will no doubt be happy to get back home. But for now, it's not hard to pick the better spot to be.

Still, we made much of our small problems last week. A friend was surprised that his kids' soccer league had cancelled games not just for the hottest days, but for the entire week. It may have been an overreaction, but caution was much on our minds (though not on that of the sweat-drenched speed-walker who buzzed by me in Thursday's worst heat, looking to me even nuttier than usual).

The warnings from local health authorities were of course prudent. Heat can kill, and our willingness to take the weather seriously played a role in keeping our casualty rate at zero.

The city advised people to seek out air conditioning, for example by hiding out from the day's worst heat at the library. Fortunately, the heat had abated by yesterday, as the library's current budget doesn't allow for Sunday hours at any of its branches in summer.

For the most part, though, we faced little that some shade and a cold beverage of your choice couldn't remedy.

It's possible we were still in a state of heightened weather-wariness from last Sunday's storm, which knocked out power in parts of the city and spectacularly blew down the MBNA stage at Bluesfest.

The following morning, with the week's humidex horrors already underway, the festival's executive director, Mark Monahan, faced the media (in T-shirt and sandals) to explain why he hadn't pulled the plug earlier as the storm approached.

"We don't automatically call a show because we have weather we see coming in," he said. "If we did that, we wouldn't be able to run a festival."

It's an outdoor festival, after all, and that's where the weather is. Similarly, it's summer, and some stinking hot days are to be expected. They'll be gone, and missed, soon enough.

ROYALS. A 10-year-old Volkswagen Golf that was once owned by Kate Middleton attracted close to $75,000 as bidding closed on eBay yesterday.

Book value on a 10-year-old Golf is about $5,700.

The difference with this used car is that it comes with a document that says it was once owned by Prince William's new bride.

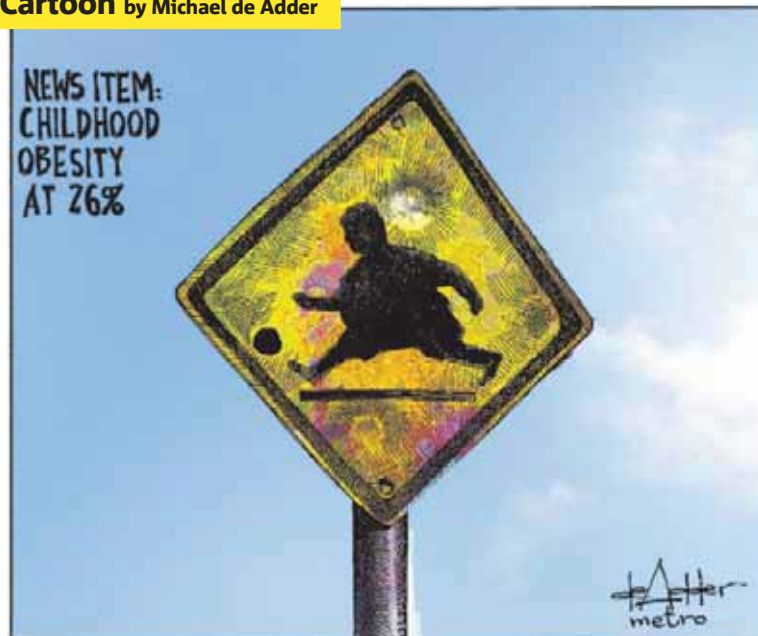

She bought the car in 2001 while she was a student at the University of St. Andrews in Scotland. It was there that she met and began dating Prince Andrew. After putting on about 100,000 kilometres, Kate passed the car onto her brother James in 2007. A few years later, the Middletons made a deal with a local car dealership in Berkshire, and the car ended up with the dealer owner's son, Sonny Brazil.

"When I saw who had had the car, it was quite a surprise, and I thought it might be a nice piece of history," said the 21-year-old Brazil.

With his eyes set on a down payment toward a house, Brazil decided to put the car up for auction.

Study finds link between penis size, economy

To his surprise, a Finnish doctoral student has discovered size really does matter when you compare penis length and world economic growth.

But despite rigorous analysis and careful mathematical charting of data, Tatu Westling isn't quite ready to, as he puts it, "imply that I believe in causality at this point."

The Helsinki University economic doctoral student's study says penis size, more than democracy, has a "robust" effect on gross domestic product.

"One striking result is the collapse of the GDP after male organ exceeds the length of 16 centimetres," Westling concludes. "Male organ alone can explain 20 per cent of the between-country variation in GDP growth rates between 1960 and 1985."

Westling's study employs a recognized 121-country dataset also used by leading economists, including chairman of the U.S. Federal Reserve Ben Bernanke, to study economic growth.

He applies all the usual controls of a serious academic study.

▶ Amy Winehouse, 27, died in her London apartment on Saturday ▶ The news, like the sudden death of anyone, was both shocking and not so shocking ▶ She joins the Forever 27 Club, a collective of deceased musicians that includes Hendrix, Joplin, Morrison and Cobain

SCENE@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN BOSTON

Before he died, Kurt Cobain's mother used to plead with her famous son "not to join that stupid club." The club in question is the morose collective of famous musicians who died at the age of 27.

As with its tragic newest member Amy Winehouse, who died on Saturday, the departure of these singers often leaves behind a complicated legacy.

JIMI HENDRIX (1942-1970)
This left-handed guitarist is credited with revolutionizing the way the electric guitar is played, and within his brief recording career he showed so much innovation that we are only left to speculate how different music would be today had he lived longer.

JANIS JOPLIN (1943-1970)
Joplin was known for her partying as much as her goose-bump-inducing bluesy howl. She came to prominence as singer of Big Brother and the Holding Company.

JIM MORRISON 1943-1971
The Doors singer trafficked heavily in prophecies of his own death, from his lyrical imagery of breaking on through to the other side to ghosts crowding his mind to his chants of "no one gets out of here alive!" on the Doors song, Five to One.

KURT COBAIN (1967-1994)
The Nirvana singer's brash approach to music reinvigorated rock 'n' roll in the '90s and like many of the artists in the Forever 27 Club, his image and iconography can still be seen on dorm room posters and T-shirts everywhere.

▶ Amy Winehouse, the beehived British soul-jazz diva, possessed self-destructive habits that overshadowed a distinctive musical talent.

Troubled talent

Lately, Winehouse had been more famous for her druggy exploits than her performances.

Anyone who saw the YouTube footage of a June concert in Belgrade knew she was ill — she cancelled her European tour immediately after. Before Saturday, that clip was a funny train wreck. Now it looks to be a cry for help.

Winehouse had only released two discs of music, her last and most famous, Back to Black, in 2006. But although her quantity was minimal, the quality was so outstanding, and revealing, that it may have been all she could give.

She lived her life like the lyrics she wrote: her misery, heartache and self-destructive urges all spoke to a pain that connected to listeners around the world.

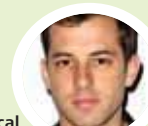

She told us she was trouble. But we never believed her when she said she was no good.

Cowboys & Aliens an '8-year-old's fantasy'

► Comic-Con fans get first glimpse of sci-fi Western flick

The star-studded Cowboys & Aliens cast walked the red carpet in San Diego on Saturday, giving Comic-Con its first Hollywood-style movie premiere.

Fans lined up in front of the San Diego Civic Theatre to see the sci-fi Western's starring actors, who include Harrison Ford, Daniel Craig, Olivia Wilde, Sam Rockwell and Keith Carradine.

The film's director, Jon Favreau, and producers Steven Spielberg, Ron Howard and Brian Grazer also were at the premiere. Rockwell called the mash-up of film genres "a total 8-year-old's fantasy."

Hundreds of Comic-Con attendees followed clues texted to their cellphones to win tickets to the event. "This kind of overshadows Comic-Con," said 22-year-old Khalil Tiner of Las Vegas, a six-year veteran of the fan festival. "This is something new, and it's exciting."

Wendy Lee of Los Angeles and Chris Saguigag of San Francisco, said they enjoyed dashing around town trying to win tickets.

"We got a lot of cardio running after the bricks" that contained a chance to attend the premiere, Lee said. "It's something we worked for really hard."

The couple was in line hours ahead of the scheduled showing, but they didn't mind missing the happenings inside the San Diego Convention Center.

"We already saw everything we wanted to see," Lee said.

Twilight's Stewart suits up for battle in Snow White remake

Kristen Stewart dons armour and wields a huge sword and shield for her next movie. Rest assured, it will not be your mother and father's Snow White.

Stewart joined other cast and crew Saturday at the Comic-Con fan convention for a preview of next year's Snow White and the Huntsman, an action-packed twist on the fairy tale.

The Twilight star told a Comic-Con crowd that doing a sweet, traditional Snow White was not something "I was jumping at."

What attracted her was that this Snow White was a bold leader with her feet firmly on the ground.

"Also, I get to have a sword and stuff," Stewart said. "Really cool weapons."

The movie is due out next June and is one of two Snow White movies Hollywood has coming.

The other, due out next March, features Julia Roberts as the evil queen.

The cast of Stewart's Snow White includes Charlize Theron as the wicked queen, Chris Hemsworth as a rugged huntsman and Sam Claflin as a prince.

The movie starts shooting in a few weeks.

Director Rupert Sanders showed off photos of the stars in costume, among them Stewart in her fighting outfit and Theron in a sleek black gown with savagely high and sharp collars.

"I'm pretty much preparing to play a serial killer."

CHARLIZE THERON, ON PLAYING THE WICKED QUEEN IN SNOW WHITE AND THE HUNTSMAN

Sanders also showed a photo of the dwarves that accompany Snow White in this version, all standing in a row looking scruffier than a gang in a police lineup.

The actors playing them include Ian McShane, Bob Hoskins, Ray Winstone, Nick Frost and Toby Jones.

There are eight dwarves rather than the usual seven.

Sanders said "there are eight because there are a few great lines when one of them gets killed."

Guilt: A mother's disease

► Sometimes as a mom everything can be totally perfect ► Yet you feel this gnawing sensation that something is just not right ► It may be irrational but it feels very real

ELISABETH BRAW

METRO WORLD NEWS

Riley Harrieff, 5, and his sister Maddy, 4, are happy children. They're well-adjusted, too, and do well in pre-school. But even so, their mother, Roberta, feels incessantly guilty.

"Every day I have times of feeling guilty for working too much, or having to work at all when I see so many stay-at-home moms," she says. "I feel guilty that I let them watch too much TV."

Harrieff, 37, works full-time as a human resources administrator in Chicago.

"Sometimes I feel guilty because other kids are in dance classes and do sports, while we don't have the time or extra money to do those things with them right now. The guilt is constant!"

On a rational level, Harrieff's guilt feelings are misplaced — but virtually every mother has them. "Mother's guilt goes back to biblical times," says Kathy Hirsh-Pasek, a professor of psychology at Temple University and the author of Einstein Never Used Flashcards: How Children Really Learn and Why They Need To Play More and Memorize Less.

"But today's mothers are expected to do it all, and they don't have extended family nearby. And "I have one hour in the morning and two hours before bed with my kids. It's hard to feel like you have quality time with them."

HARRIEFF, WORKING MOM

the grass is always greener on the other side: stay-at-home mothers want a job, 'working mothers' want to stay home, and mothers with part-time work feel insufficient in both roles."

But working mothers feel guilty more often. "I have one hour in the morning and two hours before bed with my kids, and most of that time is spent getting dressed, eating, and getting ready for bed," says Harrieff. "It's hard to feel like you have quality time with them."

Though most scientific studies show no difference between children of stay-at-home-mothers and children of working mothers, some reports reverberate in the mother-guilt community. One, earlier this year, showed that children of working mothers gain two pounds more per year than other children.

Another study this year showed that when a mother works outside the home, her child's risk of having overnight hospitalizations, asthma episodes, injuries and poisonings increases by 200 per cent.

► Roberta Harrieff with Maddy and Riley.

There's no formula to fix mother's guilt, says Hirsh-Pasek. "The best mothers make peace with themselves. If you don't have dinner ready on time, don't say, 'I failed again!' See it as an opportunity to teach your child that humans are not perfect and don't have to be."

Julia's trick

► "Nope." That was Julia Roberts' answer when asked if she experienced mom guilt. She decided to be more selective about work, which is probably not possible for you.

But you could do this: "I try to have a steadfast rule that I run a kitchen, not a diner. So, I just make one meal...and I have to cook what I think we're all going to enjoy," she told Access Hollywood.

What happens in Vegas?

► Pop star mothers say stints in Sin City bring stability to families

When most people think of Las Vegas, they see a haven for bleary-eyed gamblers, rampaging bachelor parties and all-night adventures. But for pop stars raising families, Sin City is about something else entirely: stability.

Celine Dion is ensconced in a residency in Vegas while her compatriot Shania Twain is preparing to join her on the Strip. And many female stars say that setting up shop in Vegas is a perfect way to perform for your fans while maintaining a secure family life for your kids.

"It's a wonderful gig for a stay-at-home mom," Vegas resident Marie Osmond said in a recent interview in Toronto.

"I mean, you can't beat it. I think that's probably a lot of the allure to women who have families.

"You know, you have a consistent job, you go to work at night, your children have a wonderful life. They can go to school and have their sports. They're not on the road with you."

And the majestic Vegas hotels and casinos that keep luring talent westward ensure that the transition is comfortable.

Twain, who is raising her nine-year-old son Eja with new husband Frederic Thiebaud, will begin a two-year Vegas jaunt on Dec. 1, 2012, with 60 shows per year to be performed at Caesars Palace.

Dion previously completed a five-year stint in 2007 and began a fresh three-year residency in March. She and husband Rene Angelil have a burgeoning brood to care for — three sons, including twins who are still months shy of their first birthday.

So it makes sense, then, that the promise of a family friendly lifestyle was a big part of the pitch when Caesars first approached the performers.

When wooing Dion, the luxurious hotel provided a house for her family, said Caesars Entertainment's citywide entertainment director Carlos Reynoso. Reynoso said that other standard-issue perks for their headlining talent include car service, butlers (or any other staff needed) and accommodation for nannies.

"We do everything," Reynoso said in a telephone interview. "We make it as comfortable for them as possible."

► Shania Twain is headed to Las Vegas for a two-year stint that begins in December of next year.

And that is, of course, a stark contrast to the realities of the road.

Even for artists of Twain or Dion's stature, touring can be a drag.

There are the sleepless nights traipsing around airports, the daily challenges of performing in an unfamiliar environment and the endless rotation of foreign hotel beds — furnished though they may be with Egyptian cotton and three-figure thread counts.

Osmonds

- Maria Osmond has raised eight children and does regularly travel with her kids — when she has to travel, that is.
- She has put down roots in Vegas. She recently played a series of shows in Toronto and immediately headed back to her Nevada home, where she's lived for two years now, and where her sons play lacrosse (she insists the sport is "huge" there).
- "It's kind of hard for the kids to really get involved and have their friends and things like that when you're always doing those types of things," explained Osmond, who has a regular gig performing with brother Donny at the Flamingo.
- "It's a nice life for them."

► Like other stars, Celine Dion received plenty of perks to head to Vegas.

"At the end of the day, Las Vegas is a destination market. It's a win-win situation. Not only do you get to see one of your favourite iconic stars, you also get to play in Las Vegas."

CARLOS REYNOSO, CAESARS ENTERTAINMENT'S CITYWIDE ENTERTAINMENT DIRECTOR

Hit the right notes and not the wrong nerve

► Breaking the silence can reduce the number of music-related injuries that occur each year, experts say ► Musician Eleanor Edgar, 29, says she's worried that Carpal Tunnel Syndrome will prevent her from ever picking up the accordion again.

Eleanor Edgar is afraid she may have to give up on her long-time dream of playing the accordion.

The 29-year-old Toronto violinist suffered for a year with an undiagnosed case of carpal tunnel syndrome before the pain got bad enough for her to see a doctor.

The self-taught accordionist was playing in an indie folk band and had just upgraded to a heavier instrument when she first noticed the pain in her left wrist.

"I haven't touched the accordion, and I don't know if I ever will," said Edgar. "I need to protect my wrist for the other things I do, like playing violin and riding my bike. Carpal tunnel isn't something that goes away. It's something that comes back if you do the activities that exacerbate the tendon."

Music is a surprisingly muscle-intensive activity, says Michael Macaulay, a 22-year-old bassoonist currently afflicted with a strained wrist.

Last week, Macaulay attended a workshop on injury prevention as part of his training with the National Youth Orchestra of Canada.

"It's a much more physical process than people realize, to perform (on) a musical instrument," said Macaulay. "It takes a lot of really muscular work to get through a long concert program."

That's why professional musicians tend to be diligent, highly technical and spend endless hours rehearsing.

"These people are very disciplined and very talented. They're like Olympic athletes," says Toronto-based audiologist Dr. Mar-

"In many ways musicians are as macho as baseball players and football players. They may not be six-foot-eight, but they certainly have the same attitude, that I'm immortal and I can play through an injury."

shall Chasin, who also took part in the workshop held at the University of Western Ontario.

But those hours of rehearsals can often translate into hearing loss or repetitive strain injuries if a musician has poor posture, uses excessive force or doesn't take good care of his or her overall health.

"In many ways musicians are as macho – and I mean that in the most negative sense – as baseball players and football players," said Chasin. "They may not be six-foot-eight, but they certainly have that same attitude, that I'm immortal and I can play through an injury."

For young musicians just beginning to carve out their careers, every show and every moment of practice can seem precious.

They suffer silently through pain, afraid to speak up out of fear of disqualifying themselves from a job or being forced to take a week-long hiatus.

But by keeping quiet, they risk exacerbating the injury to the point that they may have to put down the instrument for good.

The National Youth Orchestra is hoping to change that culture of silence by providing its students with information on injury prevention. The organization incorporates stretches, warmups, massage techniques and information on various injury treatments into its program.

Living a healthy lifestyle – by getting a lot of cardiovascular exercise, resting and eating a healthy diet – can also help musicians avoid injury, especially as far as hearing is concerned. THE CANADIAN PRESS

► Former Toronto second baseman Alomar and GM Gillick go into Hall of Fame side by side

The Toronto Blue Jays have finally built a nest in Cooperstown.

Roberto Alomar and Pat Gillick were given plaques beside one another in the Baseball Hall of Fame after getting inducted as part of the same class yesterday. It was fitting, as each of their memorials included a reference to the World Series titles they won together in Toronto in 1992 and '93.

Alomar spoke passionately about the five seasons he spent as a member of the Blue Jays during his acceptance speech.

The sharp-fielding second baseman thanked Gillick for the 1990 trade that brought him to Toronto and indicated the honour is a chance to give back to the fans in the city.

"My time in Toronto was the best of my career," said Alomar. "It was with Toronto that we won two World Series together — you guys embraced me from Day 1. You were with me through ups and downs and I am so proud to represent you here in Cooperstown as the first Toronto Blue Jay inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame."

Fame."

The other Hall of Famers who once played for the Blue Jays — Phil Niekro, Paul Molitor, Dave Winfield and Rickey Henderson — were on stage as part of a group of returning members. But each of their careers were defined in other cities and carry different logos on their plaques.

Alomar is the first inducted with the Jays logo.

Gillick's speech included numerous references to the Blue Jays, a team he joined prior to the expansion season of 1977 and helped build into a powerhouse.

"We thought it would be a great new challenge, accepted it and ended up living 30 years in that beautiful Canadian city," said Gillick. "For a baseball person, it was a dream come true — imagine being able to build a team from scratch in a city where everyone was excited about finally having a major-league team."

Former Minnesota Twins pitcher Bert Blyleven was also inducted alongside Alomar and Gillick.

Power pulls off Edmonton Indy win

Australia's Will Power held off a hard-charge from Team Penske teammate Helio Castroneves yesterday to win the Edmonton Indy.

Power started second, overtaken pole-sitter and leader Takuma Sato a quarter of the way through the race, then held off Castroneves to win by eight-tenths of a second.

NFLPA still poring over owners' proposal

A vote on a settlement to the lockout is what every NFL fan wants. Nobody is sure when that will happen.

The players' executive committee will meet today after lawyers worked through the weekend on the issues holding up an agreement with the owners. Several people with knowledge of the meeting have told The Associated Press that no vote to recommend a deal is certain today.

Wow..I have a GF really, since when? The only person I ever loved is a blond gal with big beautiful eyes and a killer smile, and whom I have not seen for last 3 weeks. And whom I met 2 years ago and lost my heart about a year ago. There is a great misunderstanding or somebody tried to create it. Anyway have a lovely night n great week-end!
